Consultation and Coordination

Appendix E: Consultation and Coordination

In addition to the public workshops and meetings listed below, OECA staff and the Consultant team have met with dozens of municipal leaders, interest groups, residents, and community leaders since the Corridor Management Plan process began in the fall of 1998. In nearly every case, identical presentations were in several locations across the Corridor to allow the maximum number of interested citizens an opportunity to participate in the planning process.

In general, the sequence of meetings followed the project work plan, which was divided into three broad phases:

- Inventory and issues - during this phase, an initial series of meetings were held to identify concerns and to encourage participants to brainstorm about major goals for the Corridor and possible visions for the Plan. In many of these meetings, small focus groups elicited ideas and gave participants a chance to identify priorities.
- Alternatives - two cycles of alternatives meetings were held. The first set of meetings presented broad alternative concepts and gave participants a chance to indicate which alternatives they believed were most promising to develop further, as well as to comment on strengths and weaknesses of proposals. The second set of meetings focused on boundary differences, soliciting preferences and comments.
- The Shape of the Plan - a presentation of the preferred alternative was made, highlighting the response to comments.

Throughout the process, the team met regularly with OECA's Board and their Corridor Management Plan Committee. OECA intends to continue to meetings with interested and affected parties as the Plan moves into the implementation stage.

A list of the meetings is provided below.
